

YOU CAN WORK IN HEALTHCARE

One million Michiganders work in healthcare.
Be one of them.

Change lives, including your own.

Beyond the doors of your local hospital, neighbors, friends and loved ones from all backgrounds and industries are contributing to the lifesaving care in our communities. Patients need to be checked in, medical and office supplies need to be ordered and stocked, food must be prepared, and more.

DIRECT ROLES

For every child that grew up wanting to be a doctor, nurse or therapist, those positions exist right here in communities across the state of Michigan. For direct patient care roles, more than half a million positions exist within Michigan hospitals and healthcare systems.

INDIRECT ROLES

While many people think of healthcare jobs as direct roles, more than half a million jobs exist in indirect fields such as advertising, IT, administration, HVAC, human resources, accountants, cooks, janitorial workers, writers and designers. Every business function that companies need to thrive exists within the doors of your local hospital.

BEHAVIORAL HEALTH ROLES

While many think of behavioral health as strictly therapists or psychiatrists, the field supports jobs in related roles such as case managers, peer support specialists, intake coordinators, outreach workers, recreational therapists, social workers, and more. Every skill set that drives success in organizations can be found in behavioral health settings, from crisis response to program development and public engagement.

JOBS FOR EVERYONE

Quality patient care relies on professionals from almost every sector, and your local hospital might just be looking for someone like you. Jobs are available today for patient transport, food services, environmental services, patient registration, lab aids, clerks and more.
